PUBLIC COMMENTS (3 Minute Time Limit)

(The numbers following speakers' comments reflect the approximate point in time in the archived video the speaker appears at <http://www.surfcity-hb.org/government/agendas>)

Prior to announcing names scheduled to speak during the public hearing, City Clerk Joan Flynn stated for the record that the meeting date of September 22, 2008, provided under Consent Item No. 15, should read September 15, 2008.

Corrine Ramirez voiced concerns about the disposition of Alice's Breakfast in the Park Restaurant. She described the venue as unique and discussed family visits for breakfast, beautiful park surroundings, feeding the ducks, walking the lake and enjoying the outdoors. She urged action to rescue what she referred to as a "signature structure," and requested that the Council consider aiding the business owner in renewing her lease. (24:05)

Mayor Cook asked for a status report on the site. Stanley Smalewitz, Director of Economic Development, described the disposition of the lease agreement with Alice's Restaurant including issues related to rent and facility conditions which need attention/repair. He also stated that the City initiated a Request for Proposal (RFP) from outside restaurateurs when consensus to remediate the property could not be reached between leaseholder and occupant, and indicated that the current tenant did not submit a proposal.

Richard Reinbolt voiced concerns about the disposition of Alice's Breakfast in the Park Restaurant. He submitted a petition signed by approximately 1,953 residents who wish to keep the facility open, describing it as a sacred institution that he has visited since childhood, and how it complements the park with great food and laughter. He stated his opposition to the sale of alcohol in the park, stating it would disrupt the park's serene setting. He also discussed voters' rights, and spoke on behalf of the business owner who he believes is being treated unfairly. (29:38)

Mayor Cook informed the public that the City Council has not participated in any action related to the lease agreement between the City and Alice's Restaurant. She described negotiation activity that takes place between the property owner and the Economic Development Department. Mayor Cook stated she had not been approached by the business owner on this issue, and requested other Council to identify being contacted. Councilmember Carchio confirmed being contacted by the business owner. Mayor Cook expressed disappointment that the business owner failed to submit something to the City during the RFP process.

Nancy Shaw, 25-year resident, voiced concerns about the disposition of Alice's Breakfast in the Park Restaurant, concurred with previous speakers and stated her opinion that the business owner may not have been prepared to respond appropriately during the lease renewal negotiation period. She described the venue as a peaceful and quiet oasis within the City that she has brought friends and family to, and where people can go to escape their busy schedules. She also discussed how her personal disabilities did not keep her from expressing her thoughts to the City Council. (34:26)

Mayor Cook asked if the City considered a shorter lease term to accommodate requests made by the business owner. Director Smalewitz described staff's responsibility in maintaining lease terms and conditions in a consistent and appropriate manner, and how special concessions to one and not all leaseholders create problems during negotiations. He also identified structural issues that require remediation by the business owner. Mayor Cook asked what happens after City staff analyzes the proposals received. Director Smalewitz described the next steps including financial analysis, negotiating a tentative lease agreement, and coming before Council with a recommended action that he feels will be ready some time next month.

Councilmember Carchio discussed his visit with the business owner, who apparently didn't complete the work identified by the City in order to keep her lease current. He asked if the business owner did indeed complete work requested by the City. Director Smalewitz described reviewing the latest report of invoices dated near 2000 involving termite control and painting. He stated the current instructions for work identified by the City was not accomplished to meet the terms of the new eight-year lease agreement. Discussion ensued on chronic termite remediation on the site, and costs associated with rehabilitation of the existing facility. Councilmember Coerper asked if the City was soliciting businesses that sell alcohol. Director

Smalewitz described the process of reviewing proposals and a possibility to sell alcohol, depending on the venue's theme and hours of operation. Mayor Cook suggested that further conversation resume when item is agendized.

Susan Gilmore, Huntington Beach resident and Huntington Beach Playhouse volunteer, voiced concerns about the disposition of Alice's Breakfast in the Park Restaurant and discussed fond memories of visiting the facility with her sister. She suggested that Council consider a grandfather clause that would allow the tenant to remain open for business while a new tenant proceeds through the City's entitlement process so that both parties win. She described visiting the facility as spiritually uplifting and discussed the surrounding atmosphere with a lake and ducks, healthy food, smiles and hugs, and kids and pets welcome. (47:00)

Dolores Baron voiced concerns about the disposition of Alice's Breakfast in the Park Restaurant, and described the business owner's positive reputation in the community, how her family works hard, and how the facility exudes love, trust, and spirituality. She also described artifacts present on the site, and how the surroundings offer added pleasure with wildlife. (49:25)

She also voiced opposition to alcohol sales in the park. (52:50)

Suzette Clark spoke to Council about the Cape Ann Condominium affordable housing program, describing her frustration with the City's formula to establish resale value being tied to interest rates and not property values. She stated that the City failed to inform her of the resale formula written four years after she purchased her property, and described how the program penalizes owners for refinancing their loans by extending the 30-year affordability period and does not allow owners to withdraw surplus funds. She stated her opinion that the program is unconstitutional, and her disturbance that she is unable to leave property to family members who may not meet affordable housing income requirements. (55:50)

Hannelore Palmer spoke to Council about the Cape Ann Condominium affordable housing program, and discussed the personal experiences that led to the purchase of her home, and life events that caused her to retire from employment early in 2005. She expressed frustration that she is no longer able to afford her mortgage, is not allowed to transfer ownership of property to her daughter because she does not satisfy affordable income requirements, and that the program does not allow her to rent the property out. She also discussed not being able to remove equity, and her inability to make future plans, requesting that the Council provide assistance. (59:12)

(01:03:40)

Christopher Clark, Huntington Beach resident, voiced concerns about the disposition of Alice's Breakfast in the Park Restaurant, describing how his family has frequented the facility for 15 years, and how the restaurant located near a lake with ducks is a gem in Huntington Beach. He urged Council to assist the tenant by extending her lease for two years, or consider an appropriate use that would maintain the location's current character. (01:05:08)

Yana Kennedy, Cape Ann Condominium owner, spoke to Council about the affordable housing program she is restricted by at Cape Ann. She described her professional affiliations, her single-mom status, and her regrets for purchasing property through a government program which she feels works against people. She is disturbed by the City's formula to establish resale value based on mortgage rates versus assessed property value and affordable income requirements that she believes are difficult to qualify for. She requested that the Council take action on what she describes as a poorly designed program. (01:08:11)

Shaun Dahl, Cape Ann Condominium owner, discussed his decision to purchase property in Huntington Beach, and expressed concerns about recapturing his investments and not being able to will the property to his children if they cannot meet the affordability requirements. He stated his opinion that the City failed to explain fully the restrictions behind the program, and requested that Council provide assistance to change the program. (01:10:55)

Mayor Cook asked the City Attorney to clarify concerns voiced by speakers on the Cape Ann affordable housing program. City Attorney Jennifer McGrath indicated entering into a discussion that is not agendaized would be inappropriate, that the item is pending litigation and could be scheduled for the next Closed Session, and that the City may consider reviewing affordable housing policies in the future.

Christina Daza, 11-year resident, voiced concerns about the disposition of Alice's Breakfast in the Park Restaurant and described her surprise that such a safe and happy facility existed so near her home. Dan Kanne, representing the Shipley Nature Center, invited Council and citizens to the Shipley Nature Center's Harvest Festival on Saturday, October 11 from 9:00 AM to 2:00 PM. He also gave special thanks to Councilmember Joe Carchio for his support of the festival. (01:19:30)

Steve Stafford voiced concerns about property violations being ignored by members of the Crystal Island Homeowners Association. He discussed issues he perceives are related to privacy, raw sewage odor, illegal construction without permits, improper assessments, and violations of the property's CC&Rs. (01:21:19)

Rick Lucian voiced concerns about the disposition of Alice's Breakfast in the Park Restaurant and described Alice's as a landmark of the community which is being removed. He discussed how people mean more than lease market rates, and his frustration with the City's solicitation requesting proposals for new tenancy that would allow alcohol use that is currently prohibited in the park. He requested that Council not invite trouble and police activity, not place revenue generation above community interest, and not disturb open space. (01:24:40)

Mike Reynolds, 34-year resident, spoke to Council about street sweeping on Farnsworth Lane, and Peterson Elementary School officials having the authority to halt street sweeping operations during summer school hours of operation and notify Parking Enforcement when vehicles should be ticketed. He voiced frustration when neighbors rush to move their cars on posted days and not have a parking spot to return to because school staff members and visitors reach them first, on top of the street not being swept. He described discussions with City staff that provided no apparent remedy, and requested issuance of credit on his utility bill for the service he is not receiving. (01:27:50)

Mayor Pro Tem Bohr requested the speaker complete a follow-up card.

He voiced disappointment with the tenant being asked to produce double rent when she answered a request by the City years ago to generate revenue in the park. He urged Council to assist the tenant to remain in business and preserve the community flavor. (01:30:40)
